TelVue Corporation announces product development pact with Blonder Tongue Laboratories, Inc.

November 17, 2008 (Mt. Laurel, NJ) – TelVue Corporation announced today it has signed an agreement with Blonder Tongue Laboratories of Old Bridge, NJ to jointly develop digital video storage products for sale under the Blonder Tongue brand.

“Blonder Tongue has been a New Jersey based technology developer and equipment manufacturer for more than 58 years, said Joseph Murphy, President and CEO of TelVue Corporation. TelVue is thrilled to be providing advanced digital video storage technology that will quickly find its way into Blonder Tongue’s expanding portfolio of digital video products.”

Commenting on the agreement, Pete Daly, Chief Marketing Officer of Blonder Tongue said, “We are very pleased to be working with TelVue on new storage product initiatives. The first new BT product to be offered under this agreement is the DVS-400, a sophisticated yet low cost MPEG2 digital content scheduler. The DVS-400 will enable customers to quickly store and broadcast their own content for distribution over local TV channels on either analog or digital cable systems.”

About Blonder Tongue
