TelVue Corporation and Troxell Communications Partner on Education Technology Market

Troxell is a nationally recognized reseller of educational technology products

March 12, 2009 (Mt. Laurel, NJ) – TelVue Corporation (OTC.BB: TEVE) has announced a formal relationship with Troxell Communications, a nationwide reseller and distributor of audio-visual and video equipment to the K-12 and Higher Education marketplace. Troxell will resell all TelVue products and services, including the flagship TelVue Princeton[™] digital broadcast server line, the WEBUS[®] multi-user bulletin board and digital signage service and PEG.TV[™], an internet based Video-on-Demand and Live Streaming Video service.

As part of the reseller relationship, TelVue has elected to participate in Troxell's Education Scholarship/Grant Rebate program. The Troxell Grant Rebate program is designed to support students and educational institutions throughout the United States by providing monetary assistance intended to supplement limited school district budgets. TelVue will provide significant rebates to those educational institutions purchasing several key models of TelVue Princeton[™] digital broadcast servers.

Stewart White, Troxell's Vice President of Sales comments, "Troxell is very excited by the ongoing commitment TelVue has made in providing superior broadcast technology solutions for the growing education market. TelVue's video broadcast product line is a natural fit for the way video is used today in modern classrooms at both the K-12 and University level."

Jesse Lerman, TelVue President and CEO said, "Troxell has established itself as a dominant reseller in Audio-Visual products for the education technology market place. TelVue has also developed a strong track record as an education advocate having powered broadcast television and video solutions for numerous School Districts, Colleges, and Universities across the country. I'm confident our relationship will enable TelVue to reach an even broader universe of potential users."
